Duke of Edinburgh Expeditions at Hadlow

We are situated on the edge of the Wirral Peninsula between the River Dee and River Mersey and the site consists of nine acres of flat grassland, is set well back from the road and surrounded by trees. Our Cottage and Orchard Shelter is great for those who prefer being indoors while our camping area is 9 acres of flat grassland with 6 campsites.

The Site

Hadlow is an ideal location for an overnight stay, or as a base for extended training over several days.

There are a number of campsites suitable within our 9 acres of land that include an open fronted wooden shelter and access to a number of fridges and freezers in 'The Ice House'.

There is a toilet block including separate male and female facilities, and 2 outside dishwashing sinks next to the toilet block. There are a number of water points around the site.

The site is well off the main road secluded with limited signage up a single tarmacked track with passing points. Although there is good parking for staff cars and school minibuses, we do encourage staggered arrival and departure times where parents are using the car parks to drop off or pick up larger volumes of participants (car park can cope with approximately 30 vehicles at one time).

Routes near us

The Wirral Way is a pedestrian public right of way. It runs from Hooton all the way to West Kirby taking in the towns of Neston and Parkgate along the way. It's ideal for walking and cycling along, having once been a railway but now converted into a hard packed track.

5-10 minutes walk away from Hadlow is an access point onto the Wirral Way up by Hadlow Road (disused) Railway station in Willaston Village.

Willaston village is also served by many public footpaths, including those north, to the Old Mill and Raby. To the south, there are paths to Gordale Garden Centre, which can then lead to Burton and the Dee estuary.

The majority of Duke of Edinburgh expeditions out of Hadlow are by foot, however it would also be possible to use the site as a base for cycling expeditions. There are many cyclists seen around Willaston, however, please note some of the local roads are national speed limit and additional care will need to be taken by participants. Some local cycle routes can be found here: <https://www.visitwirral.com/things-to-do/activities/cycling>
